

Thomas L. Wickiewicz, MD

A native of Jersey City, New Jersey, Dr. Thomas Wickiewicz was educated at Saint Peter's Prep and Saint Peter's College, and played linebacker for the college football team. He received his Medical Degree from New Jersey Medical School, did his General Surgery training at The New York Hospital, and Residency at The Hospital for Special Surgery. Additional training was a Sports Medicine Fellowship with the late John Marshall at Hospital for Special Surgery, and a second year observing Dr. Frank Jobe at the Kerlan-Jobe Clinic and also spent time with V. Reggie Edgerton at UCLA's Department of Kinesiology, where he assisted with research on human muscle.

Dr. Wickiewicz is an Attending Orthopaedic Surgeon at the Hospital for Special Surgery in New York City, where he has practiced for thirty five years. He is a Professor of Clinical Surgery (Orthopaedics) at Weill-Cornell Medical College, and Attending Surgeon at New York-Presbyterian Hospital. He served as Chief of Sports Medicine at HSS from 1993-2005. During his time at HSS, he educated over 164 Sports Fellows, countless Residents, and Medical Students.

In addition to his practice of Knee and Shoulder Surgery, Dr Wickiewicz has lectured nationally and internationally, and published extensively in both peer-reviewed publications and textbooks on topics related to those two joints. A recipient of three O'Donoghue Awards from the AOSSM, three Neer Awards from ASES, and the Aircast Award from AOSSM, Dr Wickiewicz continues to be active in research. Dr Wickiewicz remains an active member of the AOSSM, The ACL Study Group, the Herodicus Society and serves on the Board of Regents and the Board of Trustees Athletic Committee for Saint Peter's University. Dr Wickiewicz has been inducted in the Saint Peter's Hall of Fame.

He has functioned as Orthopaedic Consultant to the New York Football Giants, the New York Knights Arena Football Team, and for St Peter's University Division I athletics.

His family life includes his wife of forty-one years, Catherine Amoroso Wickiewicz, two children, Philip and Laura, and two grandchildren. Philip resides in Moose, Wyoming with wife Erin, and children Cody and Ava Lowell. Laura resides in NYC with husband Joseph Battiato. Wick, as he is known affectionately by friends and colleagues, enjoys spending his leisure time in Moose and in Bay Head, NJ where he enjoys family, boating, and trying to catch an occasional fish.

Past President of the AOSSM, Past President of the Herodicus Society, Dr Wickiewicz resides in New York City with Catherine.